The pack of corn at the H. F. Webb Co. shop is a little more than half in. The frost affected only about one-third and they will have the whole of the usual pack here. At Bethel the frost was more in evidence and they will probably not get more than one-third of the usual pack. In the other factory, the average will be probably about 75 to 80 per cent of what there has been in former years.

The Evening Chronicle of Spokane, Wash., has the following item of local interest in its issue of Sept. 16: "On a trip across the United States, A. S. Kimball, a prominent attorney of Norway, Me., en route to Seattle, is stopping over in Spokane a day as the guest of former Deputy Sheriff H. J. Hamlin, they having been boy friends together in New England. The visitor arrived at 6.30 this morning and was entertained by an automobile drive of 20 miles about the city. After a visit to the courthouse, including a short call in the different departments of the superior court, Mr. Kimball was the guest of his friend at Judge Davenport's, in company with Judge Sullivan, Sheriff Fugle, Justice Stocker and one or two attorneys originally of New England. Mr. Kimball will leave for Seattle this evening and will return east by way of Vancouver and the Canadian Pacific.
A story reaches us running about as follows: Arthur Meserve gathers cream for the South Paris creamery; he also sells butter. One of his customers from whom he gets cream, buys butter at the factory. He recently brought up some butter, left it at a neighbor's, it was delivered to the party, but it proved to be so bad that it was returned to the factory. Through neglect on the part of Meserve, the butter was not unloaded from the cart and on his return he discovered his mistake, so he went into Partridge Bros' store, unpacked the butter and repacked it in new paper, so it was an entirely different appearing bundle, and left it at the usual place. Some days later he met the woman of the house and asked her how she liked the butter, she said that butter was all right and they could not make her take bad butter without she knew it. A few days later he met the man and asked him how the butter he exchanged was getting along, same reply only with more emphasis, that the last lot of butter was perfect and that they would not eat bad butter anyway. Since this time the word of the farm has been termed "butter inspector." It was the identical butter that was condemned by them. This story was told me, the truth of which we cannot vouch.

Geo. E. Tubbs Dead.

George E. Tubbs, treasurer of the Norway Savings Bank, died of paralysis Wednesday night, at the home of his mother on Beal street. Mr. Tubbs has been unable to attend to his duties at the bank for several months past. At first his trouble seemed to be that of rheumatism in one of his legs, which he had injured about six years ago, and it has been growing worse under the treatment given it. From the start his ailment was of a paralytic nature. About a month since, when returning from Lewiston, on an exceptionally hot day, he was overcome by the heat and was taken to his mother's house, as she lives nearer the depot than he, and where he has since remained. It was evident at that time it was the result of a shock and his friends felt it was more than likely he would not recover from it. Mr. Tubbs has been treasurer of the Savings Bank for the past ten years and has many friends in that capacity, as he was faithful and painstaking, and had the confidence of all who had business relations with him and all regret his being taken away.
The deceased was a member of Oxford Lodge F. & A. M., Oxford Chapter and Oxford Council. He was secretary of the Chapter for the past ten years. A Masonic funeral will be held at his house on Paris street, and he will be buried in Pine Grove cemetery, Saturday at one o'clock, p. m.
Mr. Tubbs was born in this town, 35 years ago.
Mr. Tubbs came to Norway several years ago from Gorham, N. H., where he was in business. His father, whose birthplace was Norway, returned to this town when his son came back.
Mr. Tubbs was in the grocery business several years in Norway with his cousin, C. N. Tubbs. He was then elected treasurer of the Norway Savings bank, a position he has since filled with marked ability.
For a number of years he has been a member of the school board.
Mr. Tubbs married Leah I. Millett, daughter of the late Solomon I. Millett of Norway and has two children, Homer D. and Josephine. He is now entering Bridgton academy, where he fitted for the medical school of Maine, from which he was graduated in 1881. After serving at the Maine General hospital in Portland, Dr. Pike entered upon practice in Norway, where he remained until 1900, when he went to Saco.
Two years ago he gave up practice and went to Reno, Nev., returning a year ago broken in health. Dr. Pike was an officer of the Pike family association, a national organization, and had contributed valuable special reports on the Pike genealogy.
He leaves a wife, Mrs. Cora F. Pike of Reno, Nev., and his mother, Mrs. H. F. Smith of Waterford.

Followed Directions to the Letter.

A teachers' organization of primary schools took their children, the first day of school that they had a new superintendent and that his name was Mr. Felch and that he was expected to call on them that morning. She also told them that when he came she would tell them to say, "Good morning, Mr. Felch."
As it happened the superintendent did not call that morning, but during the afternoon the superintendent arrived and the teacher after greeting him turned to the school and said, "Scholars this is our new superintendent, Mr. Felch." The scholars as had been instructed followed their directions and all in unison came the response, "Good morning, Mr. Felch."

A DUCK STORY.

Roast duck is delicious, greenbacks from yellow back green duck sales are desirable, and if you have drawn the deduction that you must possess a pond to produce ducks peruse the following epistle from a bona fide customer:

"Dear Sir—What's wrong with these ducks I bought from you? They must have hydrophobia. I can't drive them into the water."

We had bred the desire to swim out of them. Ducks need only enough water to liquidate their bills.

Indeed, paddling makes them tough and stringy, and tadpole diet cultivates that fishy taste, while their scoop shovel stunts stir up so much mud that the next neighbor along the stream begins to sling mud at you for allowing your flappers to pollute the water.

Most ducks are descended from the wild Mallard, which has quacked around the world.

The colored Rouen most resembles the ancestral waddler.

There are today a great variety of quacks, but the most useful are the Pekin, Aylesbury, Rouen, Black Cayuga, Muscovy, India Runner, Blue Japs and Buff Orpington. The Pekin, Rouen, Jap and Buff Orpington excel for eggs.

The Aylesbury is most popular in England, the Muscovy in South America, the Rouen in France and White Pekin in the United States and China.

In China millions are hatched and attended by men in boats, but in this country they are mostly hatched and reared on great plants and the majority without swimming facilities.

New York and Pennsylvania are great quack states, producing a million ducks per year. Long Island, only 120 by 30 miles, is the great quack center.

Having for duck ranches, rearing 350,000 ducklings a season. Here, at Spoonk, is the largest ranch in the world, with a capacity of 70,000 quacks and also the largest incubator on earth, hatching at one time 36,000 duck eggs or 50,000 hen eggs.

American bred Pekins, the best in the world, not only swim but little, but the development of their great egg capacity has almost destroyed their brooding instinct, so that they seldom set and at best are poor mothers.

Thus the modern incubator and brooder providentially fill the gap and make this vast industry, that helps to feed the human race, possible.

But what don't we owe to gray matter and machinery?

DON'TS.
Don't feed those chicks on sloppy mash. Buy best cracked grain, mix it, pay the cash.
Don't let youngsters run in rain and damp. They will surely get the roup and cramp.
Don't let turklets run in dewy grass nor stuff themselves with decayed garden "sage."
Don't let goslings out in heavy rains. That will hardly pay you for your pains.
Don't let ducklings run in the white clover. They'll catch the bees and die all over.
Don't feed meat scraps like fertilizer. It's surely a chick's paralyzer.
Don't let white chicks run in the red-hot sun. It means brassy backs and silver cups none.
Don't talk nasty about your neighbor and his chickens. They might be worse; you might be better.

To Relieve a Choking Cow.
A dairyman says a choked cow may be relieved by tying a stick in her mouth to hold it open for awhile. Her effort to dislodge it will start the obstruction in the throat.

LOVELL CENTER.
The summer people are fast leaving town.
Gertrude Berry is visiting at G. A. Kimball's.

Respect the Mother.

Mark the young man who is coarse and disrespectful to his own mother, or the mother of his wife.

No romantic pathway can be hers who shall sustain to him the relations of wife. Not the happiest will be the lot of those who shall come to be his children. Not to be envied is the neighborhood even in which he must be reckoned as a citizen.

It does not matter what the mental stature of his mother is, how old, how bent, how decrepit, the man to whom she is mother owes her gentleness, kindness, tenderness and consideration. Did she fall back and did the children, by means of superior advantage, pass her in the race? Think of the toil and trial, her devotion and denial, her pain and her years that she gave that the children might derive the benefit. Think of her sacrifice. No wonder that she fell behind, with her heart in her home.

There is no rank, no station, no condition, that may exempt a man from kind regard for his mother.

The mother of a condemned assassin in Connecticut died at the moment he was hung. When that awful moment came, her heart strings broke. She could not live with the thought that her son was paying the penalty on the scaffold at that moment. The thought broke her heart and took her life.

Mrs. P. C. Greenleaf of East Otisfield is at the Central Maine General hospital at Lewiston. She writes: "There I am laying out a period of time recovering from a critical operation. I have been here nearly two weeks. I am gaining as well as I could expect to, but it is going to be a long time before I can work."

WEST PARIS.

Mrs. Hannah Emmons Benson. The community was surprised and shocked to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Hannah Emmons Benson, Thursday evening, Sept. 16. Many of her relatives and friends had scarcely heard of her illness when her death was announced. She took cold which quickly developed into double pneumonia, and was sick only two days. Two good physicians and a trained nurse were in constant attendance. All that human skill could do was done to check the disease but to no avail.

Mrs. Benson, wife of Rev. Seth Benson, born June 15, 1840, was the daughter of Sarah Shepherd Emmons of Biddeford, where she spent her girlhood. Later her parents moved to Greenwood and it was here while in the home of her brother Israel's family that she became acquainted with Mr. Benson and was united to him in marriage March 3, 1863.

She became a Christian when quite young and after she was married was baptized by her husband and united with the Baptist church with him. Her greatest grief was in the loss of a baby boy, their only child, which, when she became resigned, developed in her a most low Christian character that is surpassed by few.

Some 10 years ago, on account of poor health, Mr. Benson retired from active life, ministry and devoted most of his time to his farm where they were living, at North Paris. This he sold and bought the N. S. Young place in this village and moved here one year ago last March.

Mrs. Benson was one of eleven children, seven of whom are now living. Two sisters who live in Biddeford, one sister, Christiana Emmons, and four brothers, Israel F., David E., Winfield and Millard of this place.

Mrs. Benson's two daughters by her first wife, Ella, wife of Alpheus Andrews of North Paris and Lida, wife of C. N. Perkins of Brewer were present at the funeral and remained in the home several days afterward; also a young man, Samuel Johnson, who has made his home with the family since a young boy. They will all miss a devoted wife, mother and sister.

The funeral services were held at the Free Baptist church, Sunday morning at 10:30, conducted by Rev. L. W. Raymond, who lives in the upstairs rent of Mr. Benson's house and is pastor of the West Paris Free Baptist and North Paris Baptist churches. Three families and favorite hymns were sung by the choir. The Methodist and Universalist churches gave up their morning services and attended the funeral. Rev. D. R. Ford of the M. E. church assisted in the services.

The flowers were very beautiful and profuse. Two pillars with "Dear Wife" and "Mother" from the family, a large white and purple casket of flowers, Mrs. Fred Lowe and a large basket of flowers from the local W. C. T. U. of which she was a member. Besides there were several hot-house bouquets from other relatives and friends. Home raised bouquets from relatives and friends.

Stewart-Cooper.
A very quiet home wedding took place last Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of A. E. Marshall on High street. Freeman L. Cooper and Alice M. Stewart were the contracting parties.

Rev. L. W. Raymond conducted the wedding ceremony.

Mr. Cooper has made his home since quite a young boy with Mr. Marshall's family, and is well known in this vicinity. Since he became of age he has been employed in various places and has been some. This summer he has been working in Portland where he met Miss Stewart who was also working there.

His father, Mr. J. H. Stewart, has been in Portland only about six months. She is a constant attendant at church which in itself is a good recommendation.

The parlor was prettily decorated with flowers, autumn leaves and flowers for the occasion. A lunch of ice cream and cake and all kinds of fruit was served after the ceremony. The bride was beautifully dressed in a blue traveling suit and the groom wore a suit of white.

Beside Mr. Marshall's immediate family there were present Mrs. Fanefu, a sister of the groom, and her husband from Norway and Campbell Stewart, a brother of the bride from Hallowell.

The bridal couple took the forenoon train Wednesday, en route for Nova Scotia where they intend to be gone for a month and possibly a longer time. Congratulations and good wishes go with them through life.

Pratt-Willey.
Married in Portland, Sept. 21, by Dr. O. K. Yates, Esq., Charles W. Willey and Mrs. Catherine G. Pratt of Wakefield, Mass.

The bride was a southern lady, born and brought up in the institution of slavery as it existed in the South. Her father's name was William J. Hancock of South Carolina and before the Civil war was the owner of a large cotton plantation and 200 slaves. In her girlhood she was sent by her father to New Haven, Conn., to the Young Men's Christian Seminary for her education where she remained five years, and graduated at that institution. Her southern home was in North Carolina on a large plantation situated on an eminence, and her father's slaves were comfortably situated in little cottages with a garden lot for every slave family opposite. She says: "The slaves were happy and docile. I was interested in the work on the plantation. At that time we lived in luxury and happiness. After the war our slaves were freed and property confiscated and we were left penniless. My father gave to each slave family his cottage and a garden lot as their own."

A Great Poem.
"Maine is one great poem. These hills, valleys, rocks, mountains, rivers and streams are wonderful in their grandeur and beauty. I am so greatly impressed by their beauty that I should love to linger among them. Why, it seems to me that crime should be impossible amidst such environments. It is a poem and sympathy combined. It can attend otherwise at the story of Aron and the speckled rods in connection with Rachel has a foundation in philosophy as well as fact. Environment is pre-natal, its effects can be seen in the superior mind and woman that are produced among Maine's beautiful hills and streams."—[Elbert Hubbard.]

Written for the Advertiser.

After the Fair.

O what a hubbub the fair closes in. Buzzing and scrambling and making a din; Flocking up things that were brought to the show. Bunches and bunches of exhibitors go.

One can't find this and the other one that, Closely examining platters of fruit, Only to find that the numbers don't suit. Find them at last with a satisfied air.

And what a close of the close of the fair. Dumped into baskets the beauties galore. Handled so carefully three days before. Glasses and china and stoves and lace.

All got home late and were all late to bed. Late were the clothes and the breakfast the same. What a discussion all the things they could name.

The trotting was elegant all the pace, I got interested in every race. He had a good starter, he just knew his horse's name and he knows what a trotting horse is.

And didn't the comb that young red headed shock. Who tried to play crooked when scoring the race. And didn't the "Jaasper" put in some good his movement and action were metre and rhyme.

And wasn't the cattle, a grand looking lot, I never saw better ones there on the spot. The noble great oxen, the cows and calves. And didn't the sheep and the goats and lambs.

The sheep were stupid and prejudiced too. I had the best cow but old Jenks got the blue; And I was so angry I thought I should burst. I had the best goat but old Jenks got the blue.

But when it comes next year I'll join in the race. And all will be happy and go just the same. W. W. MAXIE.

How to Build Up Our Sunday Schools.
When the Golden Rule that is so much talked about in our Sunday Schools is put in practice out in the world and among our fellow-beings, then it is that the Sunday School will take on a new meaning.

When people are willing to teach and be taught, not with a dominating spirit, but with an eye single to "His glory," not to superintend, but to follow with, with no trying for ascendancy and promotion, but with the spirit of Christ esteeming others as brothers and sisters, and working in the vineyard of Christ.

We often get too much of cold and forbidding glances and telling slights outside, to have much faith in the integrity of those people when inside the church building.

We want people who will walk right up and give the right hand of fellowship everywhere and every day in the week. People who can be agreeable only on Sunday, and who have no fellowship with us on Monday to Saturday, as well as Sunday, on which to do his work.

When people are willing to drop their "righteous-thou-shalt" say, and approach one another in brotherly love and love, we have the "ring of the true metal" friendship, when we may become convinced we are in the ranks together, then and only then, we have fellowship with the God we adore is also their God.

To be sure this is a busy world but we may all always stop long enough for the exchange of little courtesies along the way of life. What Heaven knows are rough enough with them.

Do we wish prosperity? Try to bless others as well, and it may return to us again, full measure, heaped up and running over.

Avoid unjust criticisms. Bear even in mind, one falsely accused is not really injured. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again." After all, who ever met a person of whom some one did not say some disagreeable thing? The world is full of them.

People who try to rid themselves up by trying to pull another down are too plenty, their name is legion, and we are rejoiced to know that they often get their plans "stepped on" and fall into the pit they dig.

This seems like digression but it is all connected directly or indirectly with the subject. "Not to live but to live well." If we cannot believe in those we have seen, how can we believe in that which we have not seen? Faith in our fellow-beings strengthens our faith in the Divinity.

Learning to Relax.
Have you ever noticed how you urge a trolley or a train onward when you are in a hurry?

Do you realize when you are driving the machinery forward with the tension of your body?

Your mind tells you that nothing you can do will hurry you to the destination, and yet you try to edge of the seat, twist and turn, draw all the muscles into hard knots.

The car does not go one inch faster because of all the extra vitality on your part. You might just as well keep still.

It is not easy to do, no; but it is sane and helpful when you make up your mind to do it. You arrive at the end of the journey just as quickly as though you had worn yourself out, and you feel rested and willing to go on with the other hours.

CASCO.

Leach-Cook.

The home of Mark L. Leach was the scene of a very pretty home wedding when his daughter, Jennie Isabelle, was united in marriage to Melvin W. Cook of Lynn, Mass., on Tuesday evening, Sept. 14, 1909. Only a few friends and immediate members of the family were present. The room where the wedding occurred was tastefully decorated with evergreen, sweet peas and large bouquets of flowers. The bride wore a gown of white and gold interspersed with evergreens, from which hung a wedding veil of the same, the background being the same colors. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. C. Foster, former pastor of Casco Union church. The single ring service was used. Mrs. Cyrus A. Leach, sister-in-law of the bride, was maid of honor, Cyrus A. Leach, brother of the bride, was best man. The bride was attractively attired in a gown of white messaline silk trimmed with Persian lace, and carried a beautiful bouquet of bride roses.

M. L. Leach went to Gray, Saturday, on business.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Hancock have gone to Portland for a two weeks' vacation. Mae E. Hancock returned home, Saturday from Lewiston, where she has been on a visit.

Returned from California.

J. H. Nason, wife and daughter Almada, who have been at Bakersfield, California, for the past three years, have returned east, arriving here three weeks ago. Mr. Nason has been visiting his son, J. R. Nason, of Auburn.

He made us a pleasant call on his way to his brother's, R. R. Nason's, at North Waterford. The readers of our paper will remember that we have published several articles from his pen while he was in Bakersfield, and when he told us that honey cost 70c a gallon and molasses 90c we could hardly believe him, but he still claims the statement was true.

Mr. Nason sold his farm at Sebago, where he had lived fourteen years on Poor's Hill, and went West with his son, Geo. J. Nason, to Bakersfield three years ago. His son likes the western country and expects to stay there. He has purchased a number of acres of land and is cultivating alfalfa. On the crop this year, he expects to net a clean $1000 above all expenses.

J. H. Nason and wife were not fully satisfied with the western country and feel it a suitable farm here can be purchased they will buy it and remain east, but their son proposes to stay where he is.

WATERFORD.

Dr. Thomas H. Gage.

After a five weeks' battle for life against an attack of heart disease, Dr. Thomas Hovey Gage, Worcester's oldest physician and one of its distinguished citizens, died at his home, Sept. 17th, at 8 o'clock aged 85 years, 3 months and 25 days.

Dr. Gage made a gallant struggle for life, but his age was against him, and a week ago it was concluded that he had no chance to live. Old age and heart disease were the cause of death.

Since Wednesday night Dr. Gage was unconscious, from that time until he died never regaining consciousness. For nearly five weeks he was confined to his bed.

He was a prominent member of Central church for more than 50 years.

He watched the growth of Worcester from the time it was a small town of 20,000 inhabitants. He was passionately fond of flowers, and in late years obtained much enjoyment from his garden.

The funeral was from Central church. The services conducted by Rev. Dr. Daniel Merriman, pastor emeritus, and Rev. Shepherd Knapp, pastor.

Dr. Thomas H. Gage was the son of Dr. Leander Gage and Ann Sargent of Waterford, where he was born, May 22, 1823. After finishing school in Waterford, he studied medicine at the Vermont-street medical school, Boston, and at Harvard medical school, where he was graduated in 1852.

He was for one year house surgeon at Massachusetts general hospital after graduation, and from 1853 to 1856 he practiced medicine in Sterling. In 1856 and 1857 he was assistant physician at the state hospital in Worcester, and has since that time been in general practice, until he retired a few years ago, although frequently he was called into consultation.

He was married in June, 1860, to Annie M. Lane, daughter of William H. and Harriet M. Lane, Boston, who died Jan. 11, 1908, after a long sickness. Three children were born to them, Dr. Homer Gage, Atty. T. Hovey Gage, Jr., and Mabel C. Gage, all of Worcester.

Though still in good health, he retired from active practice in 1903. His good health continued until 1906, when he showed signs of weakness. The death of his wife in 1908 was a great shock and a severe blow to him.

In the Civil war Dr. Gage gave active service as a surgeon, volunteering for the work when the need of surgeons was made known.

In the late spring of 1862 a call came for volunteer surgeons and nurses from the sanitary commission, which had been thoroughly organized and equipped for large undertakings when the list of wounded grew to such proportions that the regular army surgeons were unable to care for them.

Dr. Gage and Dr. Rufus Woodward volunteered to go, and also Samuel Woodward, the doctor's brother, who, though not a physician, was anxious to be of service. Dr. Gage was placed in charge of the Knickerbocker, an old North river boat, fitted as a hospital at Whitehouse landing.

Dr. Gage was detailed to take charge of a train load of supplies to Savage's Station, within a few miles of Richmond. While he was there the wounded men began to come in from the first of the famous "seven days' battle."

The wounded had to be conveyed on the supply train to Whitehouse landing, and as there seemed to be no one at the station to see to the sufferers, the doctor offered his services, explaining his position as in charge of the Knickerbocker. His services were accepted and the men were placed in the freight.

The cars were rickety affairs. The journey, over 15 miles of poorly laid track, took until daylight, and it was a horrible night in the cars. Dr. Gage had nothing to work with, and he was able to do little to comfort the wounded.

He had no lantern, no dressings and no receptacle for water. He had two stumps of candles, but was afraid to burn them for fear the straw would catch and the train after. Many had died during the trip and those who were living were taken aboard transports. The soldiers were taken down the river to Yorktown on the Knickerbocker and from there reshipped to a hospital ship and sent into northern waters.

The Knickerbocker returned to Whitehouse landing, finding the river in a scene of confusion, as the vessels, their cargoes thrown overboard, hurried to escape the victorious Confederates.

The Knickerbocker remained a few hours at the landing, and as it sailed away, Dr. Gage saw the stores a mass of flames, burned to prevent the enemy getting them. Richmond had not fallen.

Stonewall Jackson's army was on the same railroad over which Dr. Gage and his charges had rattled, a few days before, turned the tide, and when the Knickerbocker had descended the York and ascended the James river, with the guns booming on Malvern hill, Dr. Gage found the most dejected and disheartened lot of northern soldiers, imaginable at Harrison landing, the remnant of the great army.

During the remainder of the war Dr. Gage did valiant service for the Union. He returned to Worcester and resumed his practice.

As usual, many from this town attended the annual Oxford County Fair.

C. B. Learned, wife and son Charlie, have returned from a visit in Massachusetts.

Herbert Whitcomb and Lawrence Marston, made a short trip in Lewiston recently.

A small party, consisting of Mrs. Mary Flinders and daughter Mrs. Minnie Follett, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whitcomb, Charles Kingman, wife and two sons, Gladys, Horace Allen and Lawrence Marston, made a trip upon Mt. Tiresus, Sunday. This short outing was enjoyed by all, especially by Mrs. Flinders, a former resident of Waterford, who has been in Michigan for about forty-three years.

Eva Millett is home again.

W. T. Kneeland's hand is gaining.

Will Dotson spent Sunday at Louise Brown's.

Mrs. L. L. Pennock finished work for Mrs. Elbridge Stone, Saturday.

Carl Learned and son have returned home, after two weeks vacation in Massachusetts.

The Paris Advertising Co. have recently erected a bill board at Lewiston Junction, 10 feet high by 100 feet long. It has an excellent position and can easily be seen from all the railroads. This company controls all the bill boards now in Oxford county and is doing a good business.

Western Maine Poultry Show.

Jan. 4, 5 and 6, 1910.

Remember these dates for on them comes the first Poultry Show in Oxford county for over 20 years.

Back in the 90's the Oxford County Poultry Association held winter shows at various places in the county. At that time the poultry industry was only a fraction of what it is today, and thorough-bred poultry was known only to a few besides fanciers, today it has displaced, to a very large extent, the mongrels of that day. Then there were but a few varieties of domestic poultry, now there are about 140 Standard varieties, and many others not yet recognized by the Standard, but largely bred.

This simply goes to show that, if a successful poultry show could be held at that time by a society restricted in membership to Oxford county with entries open to the State only, a very much more successful one should be held by a society that will draw its members from the State at large and open its shows to the world.

The Western Maine Poultry Association has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine. The coming exhibition will be held in New Hall, South Paris. It will be a South Paris show, each bird not disqualified by the American Standard of Perfection will receive a score card with all the defects marked on it. They have secured the services of Judge Coffin of Freeport and another judge of equal ability will be obtained. Liberal cash and special prizes will be offered on all Standard varieties.

Woman's World

TO ROUSE GERMANY.

Mrs. Carrie Catt Will Seek to Inspire German Suffragists.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Woman's Suffrage alliance, who has been touring Austria-Hungary for some time, will hold a suffrage meeting in Berlin. She hopes to arouse the fair sex of the fatherland to join their militant sisters of England and America in a vigorous demand for the ballot. The German suffragists, who are organized, but very ladylike in their propaganda, are preparing to give Mrs. Catt a cordial reception. They have engaged one of the biggest halls in Berlin for her meeting, and delegates from all parts of the country are to imbibe inspiration from the vigorous American agitator.

Mrs. Catt is well known in Berlin through her activity at the international woman's congress held there in 1904. The International Suffrage alliance.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. Since was formed on that occasion through the initiative of the late Susan B. Anthony, who was also there, and Mrs. Catt was made the first president.

The suffrage movement is particularly backward in Germany, owing to restrictive laws which have long debarred women from participating in political activity of any sort. Votes for women have hitherto been supported only by the Social Democratic party, which makes equal suffrage for both sexes one of its regular platform planks. The leading Teuton suffragist is Dr. Anita Augspurg, a woman of great culture and oratorical skill. She is a lawyer, writer and accomplished stump speaker and has been in jail once or twice as the consequence of clashes with the police in political campaigns. She is the logical candidate for commander in chief of the German suffragist forces if they respond to Mrs. Catt's call and decide to assume the offensive.

Leak in Gas Pipe.

"I cannot understand how you escaped blowing yourself up," said the older housekeeper to the young one, as she rushed out to learn the cause of a somewhat sharp explosion. "Don't you know better than to hunt for a leak in a gas pipe with a lighted match?"

"Let me tell you a secret my grandmother taught me years ago. Paint the pipe with a thick soap-suds, and where there is a leak the escape of gas will blow up soap bubbles about the crack."

"Quite simple, isn't it, but it will save you a bad start to your nerves, if not explosions that are dangerous."

Boys' Dormitory, Hebron Academy

A Statement and an Appeal.

The new dormitory for boys at Hebron Academy is nearing completion. In another week the plastering will be completed. The plumbing, electric wiring and piping for steam heat are all as far along as they possibly can be at this stage of the progress of the building. The contracts for furnishing for grading, and for the absolute completion of the building and grounds to the point of readiness for occupancy are all signed.

The building is 80 feet long, 40 feet wide, three stories; contains 32 rooms for students; a suite of rooms with bath for the master in charge; two spacious recreation rooms on the first floor, with two fireplaces, for the boys; a large room in the basement, with shower bath, etc.; and a spacious fireproof vault. The building is of brick, concrete, iron and southern pine, and is built with the same thickness of walls, the same solidity and permanency of endurance as Sturtevant Home. This building is promised by the contractors, Smith & Rumery of Portland, ready for occupancy Nov. 1st.

Completed in every way, outside and in, furnished and grounds graded, this building will cost $30,000. The second $10,000 was pledged with the condition that the trustees should raise $10,000 also before the 1st of September. The condition of this pledge have been kindly extended to October 1st.

It is thought by the committee appointed by the alumni and all those who advise with them that if the alumni and friends of the school over the state and New England generally knew how much was now due and how small the amount, and that it means that for every dollar given another one is given, that they would quickly and promptly come to the rescue, and raise the required amount.

Today $2,886.50 is lacking to meet the conditions. The principal of the Academy, acting for the committee of trustees, appeals through this article to former students, friends of the school, and friends of education, to come to the rescue in the next ten days and raise the balance that will secure for the school the whole $30,000, so that when the building is taken possession of by the students Nov. 1st, there will not be a debt of a single dollar for anything in the structure of the building, in the surroundings, or in the furnishings. The amount is not large.

There are 32 student rooms to be furnished besides the master's rooms and the recreation rooms. The committee appointed by the trustees to have charge of this building has contracted for furnishings that will cost $72 a room. If 32 persons, former students, friends of the school and Christian education will come to the rescue promptly with $72 each, the amount lacking will be practically provided. To reverse this, if 72 persons will come promptly to the rescue with $32 apiece, the problem will be equally solved.

This is a suggestion. Any gift from one dollar up will be most thankfully received. The term has opened with 200 boys and girls taking up their work with an eagerness and earnestness characteristic of the school. The trustees several years ago established the number 200 as the desideratum of attendance here.

The students of the Academy are in all the Maine colleges, in Harvard, Smith, Brown, Dartmouth, Technology, Worcester Polytechnic, Tufts, Michigan University, Oberlin College, Island Stanford University and others. The trustees, faculty and the students of the Academy appeal to friends everywhere to act promptly in this hour of need when the demand is not heavy upon any one.

The students the more confidently ask for this help from the fact that every one of them has made a contribution during the summer of sums from one dollar up, many of them students who are working their way through school. Faithfully,
W. E. SARGENT.

Barn Burned.

The barn belonging to the set of buildings occupied by Mrs. Zenia Cash, situated about a mile from this village on the Hebron road, was destroyed by fire, Saturday noon. All of Mrs. Cash's winter wood was stored in the barn. Children playing with matches was the cause of the fire. The building was owned by Wilbur L. Farrar of this place.

Frank P. Thomas of Andover who made the experiment of transplanting 10,000 spruce trees in Letter E plantation last year to ascertain whether or not larches can be successfully raised artificially, says the trees on the eighty acres already planted are doing very well indeed, and he expects to plant 10,000 more on about 30 acres of land in Letter E next year. There is every indication that the experiment will prove successful, in which case planting of trees for lumbering purposes is likely to become quite an industry in that section of Maine.

Purest Flour

"Of the various qualities of flour obtained from the same wheat, the lower grades are those most contaminated with grease, dirt, and objectionable bacteria; the freedom of flour from these, increases with its purity."

PROF. Wm. JAGO,
the well-known English chemist.

The purity of William Tell flour is due to the costly equipment and exceptional care to keep the grain and flour clean.

The wheat is stored in hermetically sealed tanks at the master's mills of Ansted & Burk Co.

Before grinding, it is cleaned six times.

Neither grain nor flour ever touches anything but the bright, clean surfaces of dust-proof machinery. Even the flour bags are sewed up by machinery.

William Tell comes to you from the mills with all the brilliant bloom that only Ohio wheat can make.

Ask your dealer, and insist on having—

LOVELL

W. B. Hurd attended the Norway fair last week. Guy Morse is back in the grain mill after ten days' rest. Virgil Charles and wife of Boston are at his father's, M. A. Charles'. W. G. McAllister and wife are at home from the mountains, where they have been at work this summer. Frank Harmon and wife have been in Portland the past week on business. Herbert Harmon went with them. Don't leave the Fryeburg fair without looking over Downing's stock of factory damaged shoes. You can save money. The corn crop will be small here this year. Some farmers have cut up their sweet corn as the frost killed it before it was ready for the shop.

Fryeburg Center.

Receives the Boston Post Cane. Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, E. C. Buzzell, has presented the Boston Post cane to Joshua Field of Fryeburg. Mr. Field was born May 24, 1822 on the old Field place in Stow and lived there until two years ago when he and his wife moved to Fryeburg to live with A. H. Seavey. On Oct. 30, 1846, he married Caroline Elizabeth Eastman of Lovell, who is yet living and caring for him. A married life of 62 years, a record seldom exceeded. They have one daughter living, Mrs. A. Leavitt of Bridgton.

OXFORD.

Fire on High Street.

About 4:30 p. m. Friday, an alarm for fire was sounded in the village and it was found the fire was in the stable belonging to Edwin Parrott on High street. The fire department quickly responded and a stream from the hand tub was soon playing on the fire. A second line of hose was extended from the force pump at the woolen mill and in a few minutes the fire was under control. The blaze was evidently caused by small people playing with matches in the hay loft. Both credit and praise are due the firemen for the way they handled the fire and the business like manner in which they put it out of commission.

George Hazen attended the Superior court in Portland on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Holden are in Gardiner, visiting with Mrs. Holden's brother.
